Conveyancing Service agreed with Which? Mortgage Advisers

ULS Technology plc (AIM: ULS), the provider of online platforms for the UK conveyancing and financial intermediary markets, announces the launch of a formal partnership with Which? Mortgage Advisers.

Which? Mortgage Advisers is the mortgage services division of Which?, the UK's largest independent consumer champion organisation, that was launched over 50 years ago. Which? Mortgage Advisers pride themselves in supporting customers through what can often be challenging and complex house buying and selling processes.

Under this new relationship, ULS has agreed to provide Which? Mortgage Services with conveyancing technology and services. The platform has been created using the Group's eConveyancer technology, and enables Which? Mortgage Advisers to help their customers to select a legal firm, to carry out conveyancing for their home move, sale or re-mortgage, based on their own personal circumstances, criteria and preference, wherever they are in the UK.

Steve Goodall, CEO of ULS commented: "We are all delighted to have been awarded this agreement, under which we have built a tailored suite of conveyancing technology-led services to support Which? Mortgage Advisers. We fully appreciate the importance of Which? Mortgage Advisers and how highly customers value their services and guidance and we are really pleased to be able to offer technology and services to help their customers to move home more smoothly."
